Biased Polar Questions

2023 - Present

Advised by: Prof. Daphna Heller

Polar questions can take many forms: positive, negative, and tag questions. Declarative sentences, when given a rising prosody, also function as polar questions. What kind of contextual factors determine the form of a question a speaker uses? How do listeners interpret different forms of questions? I am developing experimental methods to explore the

Research Experience

ExPrag Lab

2023 - 2025

Advised by Prof. Richard Breheny

- Developed experiments about scalar implicatures
- Ran experiments on Gorilla
- Analyzed data with R

Language Processing Lab

2021 - 2023

Advised by Prof. Ming Xiang

- Programmed Ixbs experiments and analyzed data
- Assisted in running EEG experiments
- Performed literature review and data coding
- Developed independent research projects

Language, Event, and Mind Lab

2022

Advised by Prof. Monica Do

- Coded production data in an experiment about gesture and word order

Sapir Scholars Program

2021 - 2022

Advised by Prof. Laura Stigliano

- Analyzed the source of topic-remnant elliptical questions (or fragment questions) in Mandarin Chinese and argued for a repairing effect of ellipsis

Multilingualism and Decision-Making Lab

2019 - 2020

Supervised by Dr. Leigh Grant

- Edited experiment materials and conducted Qualtrics experiment sessions
- Coded qualitative experiment results
